He's a nice, goofy guy. Homework SO easy, but exams SO difficult. He is pretty motivational which is nice. Lectures are all recorded, so attendance is 100% optional. Breaks down foundational stats concepts super well, just wish we were better prepared for his exams. If you've never taken stats, show up to every class!! Or you'll fall behind quick

Professor Turetsky was an amazing professor and applied the material well beyond the classroom. He is very nice and accessible outside of class. If you do the practice and recitation problems, you should do well, though it is based on what the curve is for your class.

Overall, a good professor. However his exams are harder than the other stats classes meaning that the curve is supposed to be “better” but it honestly depends on how everyone else is doing in the class. I would say that the exams were very different compared to the homework's given.

Good guy and teaches the material well. Between the material and TA there is enough material to do well on tests if you put in the work but stats is just hard. If he's "hard" depends what you mean by hard. Stats is graded stern curve so an "easy" professor is impossible A. Funny, chill, nice, available, dedicates class time for practice problems.

The pace of class is slow , so sometimes it can be boring but when we do practice questions it's needed. He values quality over quantity, and spends majority of class working a question. He doesn't gives exams back & you have to go to officie hours to see your exam, but can't keep it. For final we can have 3 and for midterm

1 sheet of notes.

I really liked Professor Turetsky he was super funny, cares a lot about his students and makes the class enjoyable as he applies the use of statistics to tangible experiences and problems IRL. The exams were fair, you get a cheat sheet, I'd say the Final is much harder than the Midterm, but again, fair and doable.

Jason is chill and gives clear, informative lectures. Lectures are recorded, so attendance is not mandatory. The exams (which only contain material from class) are challenging and will make most of your grade. Fortunately, his notes are organized and accessible. The class is fast-paced and covers a lot of material. Be ready for baseball examples.
