Amazing Professor, he has great life analogies and a great lifestyle, he is a true chill person, he gives us great education, and definitely has authority over the course he taught. I will miss his courses so much!

He's very laid back & chill, but he doesn't provide rubrics for either of the major assignments which makes his expectations unclear. He also doesn't use Brightspace so it's really hard to know where you stand in the class, especially since he doesn't tell you your grade or a feedback for the individual presentation

the group project.

Great professor and great guy.
Made classes engaging and insightful, also provided us with solid advice and guidance. You can see he cares about his students and stays in touch with some of them even after several years. Definitely would recommend and take again.

He was okay. The course was very reading-heavy, and the readings are long but interesting. Usually takes a couple of hours a night, but that might be because I took his course over a month in the summer. Exams are rough, but he always makes one of them take-home. He's very motivational, his life is pretty cool!

As long as you do the weekly readings it is so easy. Literally does not require any critical thinking skills. Exams are modeled off of scenarios in the readings. However there can be really specific questions based off things he's said in class or briefly mentioned. Smaller individual presentation and a larger group paper (12-16p) and presentation.

You will definitely regret not taking him. I took his class and want to take his class again, I'm so sad I can't anymore. I learn so much from his classes and he always shares inspirational stories - he makes

Such a nice professor, clearly cares a lot about what he's teaching. If you create a relationship with him he will provide you with unique opportunities. The class itself isn't hard, as long as you do the readings you will get an A. The exams aren't easy but if you understand general concepts and readings, it's not hard.

Some sessions got online final while one got hard in-person final. It is incredibly unfair for a lot of students because the exmas are mostly concepts that he put slides, so cheating just happens to online exams (which I would not call cheating because everyone probably does so). When students complained, he did not give any responses, class boring too

Have different forms of final in different sections of the same class!!! It's unfair for some of the sections to have final with classmates and the Internet. He has both tests and group projects but nearly doesn't have instructions to the group project. He wouldn't tell you how well you did in the midterm. No mean or grade distribution!

Tbh I think Raymond has super low expectations and is a super chill person in general. His life is lowkey legendary. Exams are heavy on memorisation but if you do the readings each week carefully and take notes in class you should be more than fine. In-class presentations were all super fun - and dont be shy! Its easy to earn participation points
